03 ERF 30th Annual Conference

The ERF 30th Annual Conference aims to address the unprecedented regional challenges and to respond to the paramount global disruptors to envision a more resilient future, systems and institutions. ERF conferences provide a multi-stakeholder platform bringing together thought leaders, distinguished researchers and policymakers to discuss and debate pertinent global and regional perspectives to build towards a more peaceful prosperous future for generations to come.

The MENA region has more than its fair share of conflicts, which set the region into a path of human suffering, despair and instability. The Arab-Israeli conflict has become an inter-generational impediment to regional peace, development and cooperation for almost eight decades. It has so far plunged the region into four major regional wars and several uprisings by the Palestinian people, who continue to resist occupation and strive for their legitimate right to self-determination and statehood. The most recent outbreak of the tragic violence in Gaza is a natural consequence of the lack of will and commitment by the regional and international communities to achieve a just and amicable resolution of the Palestinian question, leading to a two-state solution.

Moreover, the aftermath of the Arab Spring ushered the region into political instability, even large-scale civil wars in socially fractionalized Arab countries affecting both the Asian and African wings of the Arab world. Instead of propelling the region into a wave of national renewal, democracy and economic renaissance, the unintended consequences of the Arab uprisings have further aggravated conflicts and instability in the region.

The state of conflicts and instability degraded state capacity, government effectiveness and public policy, resulting in unsustainable macroeconomic imbalances, high indebtedness and disappointing growth performance. Therefore, most economies of the region became exposed to the recent global shocks and associated crises - starting with the 2008-9 financial crisis, followed by the global COVID-19 pandemic, the rivalry between China and the United States and finally Russia's invasion of Ukraine. The impact of these crises has indeed taken a toll on the region.

Titled Tragedies of Regional Conflicts and Promises of Peacebuilding: Responding to Disruptors and Enablers of MENA Development Pathway, the ERF 30th Annual Conference plenary sessions aim to examine and assess policy measures to build towards resilient post conflict economic systems, balancing technology and future of work, and exploring prospects towards regional cooperation. In addition to the plenary sessions outlined in this document, the conference agenda will include 20 sessions providing a platform for some 60 diverse papers spanning cross-cutting themes selected on basis of rigorous refereeing process in response to an open call for papers. In keeping with ERF tradition celebrating excellence and unveiling outstanding performance, ERF Best Papers will be acknowledged in the Closing Plenary.

ERF gratefully acknowledges financial support to the ERF 30th annual conference from International Development Research Centre (IDRC), Agence Française de Développement (AFD) and University Mohammed IV Polytechnic (UM6P), Africa Institute for Research in Economics and Social Sciences (AIRESS).

Plenary 1: Panoramic Political Economy Perspective of MENA

To set the analytical stage, this plenary would build on three flagship publications, namely: Economic Origins of Dictatorship and Democracy, proposing a theory of the emergence of and stability of democracy and dictatorship; Why Nations Fail: The Origins of Power, Prosperity, and Poverty sharing a theory of why some countries have flourished economically while others have fallen into poverty; and finally The Narrow Corridor: States, Society and the Fate of Liberty, examining the incessant and inevitable struggle between states and society, giving an account of the deep historical processes that have shaped the modern world.

Plenary 2: Prospects in the Middle East for Peaceful Resolution of Conflict: The Generational Disruptor and Impediment to Development in the Region

The plenary aims to discuss the conflict in the Middle East as a generational disruptor and impediment to regional peace and development and the prospects for renewal and development under a just, amicable peaceful resolution, leading to the cherished goal of the two-state solution.

Plenary 3: SDG Stimulus to Deliver Agenda 2030

To deal with the multiple shocks that are threatening to further reverse progress on the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), the SDG Stimulus puts forward three areas for immediate action, first: tackling the high cost of debt and rising risks of debt distress; second: massively scaling up affordable long-term financing for development; third: expanding contingency financing to countries in need.

Plenary 4: Artificial Intelligence and Future of Work

Disruptive technologies at large and AI specifically, will surely impact inequality, but the nature of that effect will depend on exactly how this technology is adopted. The plenary would set forward how to deploy generative AI to create and support new occupational tasks and new capabilities for workers. How public policy has a central role in encouraging this positive path of technology would also be addressed.

Plenary 5: Relocalization and Regional Cooperation in an Increasingly Shock Prone Global Economy

The changing global environment calls for a new push for Arab economic cooperation and integration, taking into account: the current geopolitical situation; the possible intra-Arab value chains and how they could be developed; potential emerging areas for intra-Arab cooperation: digital market, power market, water and food security; possibilities for greater economic integration with neighboring regions, namely Sub-Saharan Africa, Asia, and Europe.

Policy Panel: Morocco's Quest for Stronger Inclusive Growth

Morocco has decided to change course with the adoption of a new model of development, which came with an ambitious reform track, giving the priority to human capital, as reflected in the recent generalization of social protection and the ambitions to climb up the complexity ladder in global value chains.
